About the ACGA

The American Council on Gift Annuities (ACGA) is a qualified nonprofit organization formed in 1927 as the Committee on Gift Annuities and was incorporated as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit in 1993.

Since 1927, the ACGA has promoted responsible philanthropy across the United States, providing practical guidelines, safe practices, and ethical framework for non-profit organizations, professional development officers, and thoughtful donors. The primary focus has been on charitable gift annuities, a unique planning tool for the realization of personal, family and charitable goals. The ACGA has worked to demystify the use of charitable gift annuities to the advantage of nonprofits and donors alike through the following activities:

- ensuring sound financial assumptions as the basis for the maximum suggested charitable gift annuity rates
- disseminating best practices for nonprofits offering charitable gift annuities
- promoting the Philanthropy Protection Act of 1995
- educating thousands of professionals engaged in gift planning
- promoting the Model Standards of Practice for the Charitable Gift Planner
- gathering data and conducting research
- bridging the gap between regulatory agencies and charities
- monitoring legislation of importance to the nonprofit sector

Research, educational, and service activities of the ACGA have been underwritten by partnerships and membership dues of participating organizations. The quality and integrity of the ACGA's work has been utilized across the philanthropic and commercial industries. However, little or no funding is available for expansion of services and influence. Your partnership will help us achieve our mission and vision.

Our Mission

The ACGA's mission is to foster the success of charitable gift annuity programs at charities nationwide through the promulgation of suggested maximum gift annuity rates, education, research, monitoring state regulations, advocacy, and other activities that promote good gifts for nonprofits and their donors.

Our Vision

The ACGA is the premier resource for charitable gift annuity program success.
